Joint newsletter Ferme d'Orée and Ferme Côté Jardin

Dear clients,

On the Ferme d'Orée, things are going smoothly and Nathanael has everything under control. We delayed calving time this year and that might have been a good bet, because we want those calves born in dry conditions on grass that is actually growing. The pigs are doing fine as well.

Chef Shaun Hughes, who opened Furley Meat, Bread and Wine in Hudson only a month ago, says his clients are raving about our products. Drop in and visit, if you are around there.

Many people ask us to visit the farm, but it is really not the greatest time now, and with the start of the vegetable project we will be excruciatingly busy for the next few months.

We will organize a pumpkin patch & farm visit in the fall!

On the Ferme Côté Jardin, one of our greenhouses was damaged by the strong winds on Friday night, but this will only cause minor delays as it had not been planted yet. Unfortunately, the soil is unseasonably cold and wet, so there is not a whole lot that we can do in the fields.

Not that we do not have enough to do : we are planting and seeding the tunnel and the greenhouses and bracing for a very busy and more condensed planting time. A few nice days is all it takes!

WE STILL HAVE SOME SPACE, BUT WE THINK THAT OUR VEGETABLE SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL SELL OUT AS SOON AS GOOD WEATHER HITS, SO IF YOU WANT VEGETABLES, PLEASE DO NOT WAIT TOO LONG!

We will only take a fixed number of subscriptions!
