October 2018 Newsletter

Dear clients,

More than twenty years ago, we decided that we wanted to be part of the sustainable agriculture revolution that started taking off. At first, we wanted to grow organic vegetables, but we ended up becoming one of the premier meat producers in Québec!

It took us more than a decade to save enough money to buy a farm and another one to make it work. This year, we decided to add a few small projects to underline our commitment to quality: Mangalitsa pigs and Bresse chickens. The pig maternity that we are building this fall is another milestone in terms of sustainability.

We can safely say that we are lightyears ahead of what other small farmers and consumers do in terms of product quality and the development of sustainable farming models. Yet, we feel that we are only at the beginning of our journey.

We long for the pioneering years and a broader sense of community. Therefore,

Gert is starting a vegetable basket project in 2019. He wants to bring more quality and diversity, and especially more sustainability to small scale vegetable production!

At the Ferme d'ORée, our goal has not changed: we produce responsible food that heals the planet one bite at a time! And we could not do it without you. So, we want to take some time to thank you for your unwavering support, your confidence and your commitment to buy responsible food!
