Ferme d'ORée

Responsible food

Hi all,

With the fall comes big changes at the farm. Maude will be leaving us after many years of being the main contact point for our clients. Katy will take over order preparations. Since she does not speak English, Sarah and Simon will assist her if you have any questions. Simon will be doing the deliveries. Maude relied a lot on her cellphone to communicate with you, but we have always preferred email for non-urgent questions. You can also call the farm 819 875 1606. Please leave a message if we are not there. We are probably in the field.

It is getting colder, and the cows are starting on the last pasture rotation. Before long, the calves will be weaned, and the other animals will go inside. The barn renovations are advancing, but we never found the time to get started on the hay shed. We have enough hay for winter, but we are hoping for some more nice days just the same!

Agriculture is difficult. Our hearts break every time we hear of another young, excited farmer that is throwing in the towel. There are so many this fall! Many had put their hopes in selling directly to the consumer, but it is just too tough to pay off a farm, especially with interest rates rising. Life is so much easier for generational farmers! We did not inherit our farm, but we have been here for a little bit longer now, and we are doing ok.

We find that the home deliveries done by 'Postes Frais' remain difficult, and we think we can improve service if we take more control. We invite you to email us with your experience with the home deliveries so we can make better decisions.

Sales are through the roof lately and we recommend (as always) to order on time. The Sunday truck is chockfull every week now.

Sorry, but we do not have a recipe this week.

The specials are (as always) on the front page of the webshop.
